

The GoshVictor Young Enterprise team hopes its healthy recipes cookbook to get young people busy in the kitchen will be a big earner. The group includes, left to right, Madison Guilliard, Harry Page and Emilia Robinson. (Picture by Steve Sarre, 19950338)

Healthy cookbook YE team's main product

A COOKBOOK aimed at getting young people cooking healthy food is the main product being produced by Young Enterprise group GoshVictor.

Young Enterprise aims to develop young people's leadership and business skills.

This year, four groups are taking part from a number of secondary schools.

There are six young people from Year 11 and 12 in GoshVictor who are busy developing their ideas.

'We chose the name as a play on Guernsey gache and Victor Hugo,' said group member Emilia Robinson, 16.

'We wanted a name that would resonate

by Juliet Pouteaux

jpouteaux@guernseypress.com

with the people of Guernsey.'

The group issued shares in their company to generate capital and they were using that to create items to try and turn a profit and pay off their shareholders. They have also had support from local businesses, including Printed in Guernsey.

They have been designing tea towels and an apron, but their main item is a cookbook.

'We are aiming it at young adults,' said group member Harvey Page, 17.

'We are going to focus on selling to mums, who will buy them as gifts for Christmas.'

The group spoke to friends and family to collect the recipes and also tried some of them out so they could take photographs to go in the book.

The pesto and Parmesan chicken bake was particularly popular.

The book also contains some classic Guernsey recipes, as well as vegan and gluten-free alternatives.

It will be sold for £7.50.

The group will be selling their wares in the High Street on late shopping evenings.