

Charlotte Zabiela and Corey De La Rue, both 14, with television personality Dick Strawbridge, one of the judges in the annual CGI technology challenge. (Picture by Peter Frankland, 4542698)

CGi challenge focuses on speed

SECONDARY pupils got a double dose of speed this week – overcoming the challenges set by the Confederation of Guernsey Industry's annual technology challenge and seeing up close Zef Eisenberg's British land speed record bike.

Mr Eisenberg was a judge alongside

TV personality Dick Strawbridge at the Scouts' Rue Maingy activity centre for the 16th running of the annual CGI event, involving students from all the secondary schools.

They were split into 10 teams and first had to design a land yacht, then a vehicle capable of negotiating a twisting course and then a short sprint.

Mr Eisenberg said he was impressed by the teamwork shown.

'What you have achieved in a day took me about three years with my land speed racing.'