FOUR Guernsey residents will be in Jersey supporting this year's NatWest Island Games as accredited Waitrose Games Makers.

Oliver Wade, Ellen Hughes, Kirsten Price and David Rouxel have been doing their Waitrose Games Maker training over the last six months in order to prepare for the event, which begins tomorrow.

Mr Wade will be supporting the Games as a photographer on the media team. Ms Hughes will be based in the polyclinic in Howard Davis Park as a medical receptionist, Ms Price will be working as part of the Games work force team at the cycling events and Mr Rouxel will be working across all of the events throughout the week.

In total more than 400 people will be Waitrose Games Makers, and will be giving up their time to aid the smooth running of the competition, which will see some 3,000 athletes from 24 islands compete in Jersey.

One of the Jersey Game

Makers, Clare Germain, said a lot of effort and dedication had been put in by the volunteers. 'It is great to have the support of other islands, particularly our sister island of Guernsey.

'It is going to be all hands on deck.

'Our Guernsey Waitrose Games Makers have invested a lot of time and money to get the training they need to join the team, which is fantastic.

'The amount of dedication they've put in to support the Games is inspiring.'
